CONCERNING KISSING.

Why Little Women Have the Advantage in Osculation. I have never been an ardent advocate of kissing, but I am sure the people who are must have reduced it to a fine art, writes Bab" in the New York Ster.

Naturally the enjoyment depends largely on the person who is kissed, and after all there are only two people worth kissing— that is, men people—one is a boy baby and the other is a man who is devoted to you. Kissing a baby, a nice, sweet baby, must have been one of Eve's consolations, while kissing a man who is fond of one is delightful because he always seems to like it so much. I think it is wiser for a woman not to like it, because then she doesn't commit the crime in a spirit of wild impulsiveness, but goes at it with a perfect consciousness that she knows how to do it and in the very best way.

Little women, as a general thing, have the better of it as far as kissing a man is concerned, because they have to reach up; that generally necessitates putting a hand on each shoulder, and the human represent-ative of a Newfoundland dog is charmed to his soul, because he thinks the little weman likes him so much. The woman who has to reach up to a man can always control him. His size acquits her of her folly, and he is certain to regard her as a dear little thing, and never see her Machiaveillan schemes for ruling him.

If I had daughters I should put heavy weights on their heads in early childhood to keep them from growing very tall, because to the small comes the victory. Look at Cleopatra; she was little. Helen of Troy barely reached to the shoulders of the man who loved her, and in later days Catherino of Russia and Marie Stuart were both slender and rather small. PET PERORATIONS.

Amusing Anecdotes of Several Well-Known Political Speakers. Senator Hoar was speaking in one of the Butler campaigns, says a Washington letter to the Boston Advertiser. In beginning his address one night, he had made an allusion to the American flag, the pleasure of seeing it the American fing, the pleasure of seeing it in foreign countries, and what a disgrace it would be to have its promises of truth belied by the greenback. The period was happily received, and after being carefully devel-oped was used once more in public speeches, being reported naturally verbatim in some of the newspapers. One night the Senator went down into Norfolk County intending to use the flag paragraph as a peroration once more. He was introduced by a lively young man, one who made several complimentary allusions to what he had done in public life and for the party. Finally he came to the close. "Senator Hoar, who only the other night said so eloquently, as you will remember," — and then the lively young man recited verbatim and entire Mr. Hoar's percration making the point on the American flag. Governor Long had a little bit of just ach experience in the Garfield campaign. The Governor had one pet section of his speech, which he had wrought out with care and patience, and which had been very happily greeted, on the whole. He had em-ployed it on two or three occasions, notably at Augusta, when Frye, Hawley, Burrows, of Michigan, and others were present. Later, he had an invitation to go to Michigan to speak at Kalamazoo, Mr. Burrows' home. The invitation was accepted and the speech was made, being very cordially and enthusiastically received.
